But the giory of the garden

ts the oye.

For where the thick old barrels grow along the thin red well You'll find the tool and potting sheds, which are the heart of all; the cold frame and the bot houses, the dung pits and the tanks.

The rollers, carts and drain pipes, the barrows and the planks.

And there you'll find the gardeners, the men and 'premice boys Told off to do as they are bid, and do it For except when seeds are planted and we shout to scare the birds.
The giory of the garden abideth not in

And some can plant begonias and some can bud a rose, and some are hardly fit to touch with anything that grows; But they can mow and roll the lawns and sift the mand and loam, what royal entertainers the good man and myself were.

Now please do not get the impression For the glory of the garden glorifieth all that come.

Our England is a garden, but such gar-dens are not made By singing O how beautiful! and altting in the shade;
While many better men than we begin their working lives

By digging weeds from gravl walks with ken dinner knives.

There's not a pair of legs so thin, there's not a bend so thick.
There's not a hand so white and weak, there's not a heart so sick. But it can find some needful job that's crying to be done. For the giry of the garden occupieth all

So find your job with thankfulness and work till further orders, If his only netting strawberries or killthe stugs in borders;
And when your back stops aching and your head begins to harden
You'll find yourself a partner in the
